The publisher is retracting and removing [1] following a reader's report of significant overlap of text between the chapter and previously published thesis [2].

Subsequent investigation of the reader's allegations has confirmed the overlap. Significant portions of text and data in the book chapter [1] are identical or very similar to those used in the thesis [2]. Identical portions of text and data are unattributed and presented as if they are original.

Even though the author of the chapter had no malicious intentions, this inevitably forms a basis for retraction and removal according to current publishing ethics conventions.

The publisher regrets any inconvenience this might have caused to the readership.
